Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 06 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Remaining cold with scattered showers.

Today:
A cloudy start along the south coast with rain fringing the southwest. Brighter in the north with sunny spells and some scattered showers. Through afternoon lengthy sunny spells develop from the north with the chance of the odd blustery shower. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
During the evening clear spells develop widely with perhaps the odd shower along the north coast. A cold night with a frost and winds becoming light. Minimum temperature -4 deg C (25 deg F).

Friday:
A frosty start for many with sunny spells through morning. Perhaps the odd shower developing in the east into afternoon but staying dry with sunny spells for most. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cloudy and windy, but warmer, with outbreaks of rain, heavy at times on Saturday. Some rain on Sunday with limited sunny spells. Heavy showers with sunny spells between on Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.